Dear editor

Thank you for reading the paper by In Ju Yoon et al and providing your valuable insights. Your feedback is highly appreciated and will greatly assist our research.

The points you have raised are very useful and will be taken into consideration for our future research. In particular, we believe that using additional measurement tools can lead to more accurate results. Your recommendation of online courses such as internet cognitive behavioral therapy can help patients maintain better health, which is a significant finding.

We will actively consider your feedback to further develop our research and strive to make it more effective. Thank you again for sharing your thoughts.
